

MARRIAGETEAM

Couple Coaching Agreement

1. MarriageTeam coaches have been trained in the coaching skills of listening, asking questions, sharing their life experiences, and most importantly, helping you resolve the issues you are facing. Coach couples want to help you be successful in your marriage. While, coach couples are not lawyers, licensed counselors, therapists, or psychologists and do not provide marriage or family therapy or legal advice, they can facilitate significant improvements in relationships.
2. Coaches will guide you through communication, conflict resolution, problem solving and other skill-building exercises, but the results of these exercises depend on your commitment.
3. As a couple seeking coaching, MarriageTeam asks that you commit to completing the full coaching curriculum. If you have specific concerns, bring them to MarriageTeam's attention.
4. Although many couples report improved relationships as a result of coaching, there are no guarantees about the success of the coaching process in your unique situation. Change and growth are hard work and are best accomplished when you work together as a team.
5. Conversations with your coach couple will be held in confidence with four possible exceptions: 1) possible referral to a MarriageTeam lead couple for guidance or direction or 2) reporting suspected abuse of children, the elderly or mentally ill or 3) responding to your pastor's request for general status information, if you were referred by a pastor or 4) subpoena by a court.
6. There are no special legally recognized "client privileges." Coach couples could be subject to subpoena by a court and required to testify, but will not voluntarily testify.
7. MarriageTeam has a money-back guarantee. If you are not satisfied with your coaching experience, submit your dissatisfaction in writing to MarriageTeam for a refund.

We have read this agreement and understand that our coaches are not counselors, therapists, psychologists or lawyers, and do not provide marriage or family therapy, counseling, or legal advice. We understand that we are responsible for all decisions that we make and all subsequent actions we take.

As voluntary participants, we hereby release MarriageTeam, its officers, employees, and agents from liability for any and all civil or criminal claims, actions, obligations, costs, losses, or demands of any kind arising out of participation in this program or actions that we take during or after the coaching process.
